

To All Professional Artists and Arts and Design Graduate Students who have a desire to become “community-engaged”— Would you like to learn more about Creative Placemaking and becoming an Artist Leader in the community? The Center for Creative Placemaking is pleased to present a “mini-conference” on April 13, from 6-9 PM. Hosted by the joint Rutgers University-Newark and New Jersey Institute of Technology Theatre program, this forum will give you a broad overview of the emerging field of Creative Placemaking and the opportunity to explore ideas of how you might begin to increase your professional portfolio by developing your leadership capacity to engage in the field.

Creative Placemaking Forum
for Professional Artists
and
Graduate Arts and Design Majors
April 13th, 6-9 PM
on the campus of NJIT

Increase your Knowledge & Leadership Capacity

During this forum, we’ll take a broad look at the field of Creative Placemaking. We’ll talk about artists engaging in a civic capacity, deliberative culture, and becoming an agent of change for sustainable community growth. We’ll look at ways you can create new avenues for your art as well as a possible new professional pathway through social-centric entrepreneurship!

Why not come and share the conversation? Join the CCP team and a group of your NJ professional artist colleagues with whom we’ve been exploring all of this for a lively exchange. This evening is sure to stretch your mind, set the wheels turning and open up a new world of possibilities for you!

Registration is required and seating is limited!

I want to join the Conversation!